Sergeant Milner, on his rounds, en-countered no difficulty, all the proprie-tors of the gambling rooms readily ac-ceding to the demands of the law and closing their doors, except the Ex-change club, which offered a protest, on the ground that it is a gentleman's club, and does not come under the head of gambling. The report that all the games in town had been closed caused something of a sensation among the gamblers, many of whom are loath to believe that the order means the absolute suppression of gambling, but take the more encouraging view that it is the beginning of a plan to confine gambling Commercial street.

There are rumors, also, that the closing of the rooms in town is for the purpose of allowing the Watsatch comcination, in which the most prominent sporting men of the city are interested, to corral all the gambling. Those who are of this belief declare that within a short while the combination will open a house on Commercial street, and run about as usual. Chief of Police Paul made the following statement: Chief Paul's Statement.

"I knew that some gambling was going on in the city, but had no idea that it was so extensive until I had investigated. Of course, every sensible man knows that it is impossible to stop gambling absolutely in a city of this city." There are then here who will gamble if they have to spit at a crack to do it. But there have been altohave any. The order is for every one of them to close their doors tight. "We used to have the gambling question pretty well regulated. Many a time a workman went into a house and lost his week's earnings, and his wife would come to me and tell he r story of distress. Never have I struck a pro-prietor who would not, when I went to him, under those circumstances, give back what the man lost, and do it heerfully. If there was only a way to regulate things so that gambling houses would be operated for the benefit of those who can afford to gamble, it would save heaps of care and trouble. "At all events, we have ordered gambling stopped, and, if it is not, ar-rests will follow."

A wholesale delivery of the prisoners of the city jail was prevented early yesterday morning by the accidental arrival of a police officer. He discovered two of the most desperate criminals at work and with other officers prevented the crooks from making their escape.

The attempt was made between midnight and 3 a. m. yesterday and was discovered shortly after 3. Officer Barlow, in the alley south of the jail, was attracted to the north window by the quiet, ripping sound of a saw at work. He waited a few minutes in order to satisfy himself that an effort was being made to saw the bars of the prison and, going into headquarters, secured the aid of another officer and together they make a tirp to the jail to investigate.

Going quietly up the stairs they noiselessly one ned the door to the last interrupted and placed in separate cells for the remainder of the might.

Acting under orders from the head of the department, Sergeant Thomas Milner last night located ten different resorts where gambling was said to be running, and commanded the proprietors to cease operations at once, under pain of arrest and prosecution. All obeyed.

It will surprise a few unsuspecting citizens to learn that the sign of the green cloth was visible in Sait Lake to such an extent. It surprised Chief Paul when he first discovered it, but in no way did the discovery subdue his determination to restrict the vices prevalent in the city to the limit. After investigating the situation, he sent Sergeant Milner out on a round-up, with instructions to close them all.

The sergeant found ten. The following had paraphernalia for all the usual games, including faro, roulette and poker:
